

Trickster's Truth

by Rainbow Stevie

Category: Digimon
Genre: Angst, Poetry
Language: English
Characters: Yamato I./Matt
Status: Completed
Published: 2000-06-18 09:00:00
Updated: 2000-06-18 09:00:00
Packaged: 2016-04-27 20:37:18
Rating: K+
Chapters: 1
Words: 231
Publisher: www.fanfiction.net
Summary: A sad little reflection poem, in the voice of one Matt Ishida...

Trickster's Truth

Disclaimer: Poem written about Matt, lovely character as concocted by people who work for Toei and...other people...anyway, it's an homage, not an attempt to make money. Poets don't earn much anyway.

* * *

>Trickster's Truth

Young in body but old at heart
> A shadow to my brother, and to the others, worlds apart

Memories dance before my eyes
> As taunting and elusive as the shifting lights of sunrise
 Today
or tomorrow, they blend as one
> Oblivious to this wounded heart; my purpose now is done

In what seemed like seconds but were really many days
> Silently we all grew up; most in better ways
 However, there is one left here reflecting on his life
> Indescribably lost, and confused in all the strife
 Does this mean I truly am behind; the trickster spun some truth?
> And if it does, and if he did, I'm right - there is no greater pain
than youth

* * *

>AN: That was supposed to be him reflecting during his "break" where he disappeared for quite a while, shortly after meeting Cherrymon. I wrote it because I found my "name poem" from 7th grade, where we had to write a poem about ourselves using the first letters in our 1st and last names. In case you didn't notice, the 1st letter in each line vertically spells "Yamato Ishida".

```
>
```

```
End
file.
```